

International Communication Made Easy

Take a look at the following words: abbreviation, abdication, abduction, abjuration, abolition, abomination, aborigines, absolute.

You understand them perfectly, because they are English words. But they are also French, and with some minor variations in spelling, Italian and Spanish too. Because they are English, French, Italian, and Spanish they may be called international.

Actually they were chosen at random from the first pages of the dictionary of Interlingua, where they take their place with over 25,000 similar words. Interlingua is the name given by a body called I.A.L.A. to its compilation, published in 1951, of the major part of the common element in the languages of the European civilization. There exists the UMI – Union Mundial pro Interlingua – the international organisation with representatives in whole Europe and America, aimed to the support and promotion of Interlingua.

Interlingua is the common language of the European civilisation and is understood like a streamlined version of one's native tongue, wherever the influence of that civilisation is recognised. It is not an experiment, it is the working tool, ready to serve. Short example (with translation):

*Es ben cognite que ab le 1 de januario 1993 existe super le mappa del continente europee un nove stato Slovakia.
P.S. 2001 esseva le Anno Europee de Linguas.*

*It is well known that since the 1 january 1993 exists on the map of continent
European a new state Slovakia.
P.S. The year 2001 was the European Year of Languages.*

Interlingua: a working tool

Interlingua is not a project or an experiment. It is currently used in conventions, literature and magazines. You can read Interlingua if you had no more than one semester of high school French or Spanish or Latin and flunked it. You can read and understand a great deal of it, even if you have never had contact with any foreign language.

Here is a brief sample of Interlingua:

Le unitate del civilisation occidental corresponde in grande mesura a un unitate linguistic. Le linguas que nos distingue como francese, anglese, espaniol, germano, italiano, etc., ha in commun un fundo si extensive de ideas e de principios, de formas e constructiones, que on se senti fortiate reguardar los como variantes del mesme standard. Iste standard es Interlingua, le "lingua general" que differe del linguas coordinate in illo solo como un typo differe del individuos que illo representa".
